

PROBATE

Losing a loved one is never easy on anyone. On top of your grieving there is also the matter of the deceased's estate and what has to be done to sort that out.

Whilst it may seem that there is not much to be done it is important that everything is dealt with properly to ensure that the deceased's wishes are complied with. In addition, any debts have to be discharged to prevent any future claims against the estate.

Adlington Law are here to help you deal with all matters, ensuring that everything is dealt with quickly and efficiently and with as little stress and disruption to you as possible.

If you need help and advice about the estate of someone who has died, whether it be to obtain just a Grant of Probate or Letters of Administration or if you need someone to take care of administering the estate on your behalf if you are a personal representative, one of our Private Client specialists will be happy to assist.

Remember, by failing to deal with a deceased's estate in the correct manner, you and your fellow Executors or Personal Representatives open yourself up to financial liability. This can be avoided by speaking to one of our friendly team, who can offer you advice and provide you with the assistance you need to enable the estate to be dealt with, not only as efficiently and as quickly as possible, but also as it should be under the law.
